

The Mary Roberts Rinehart Crime Book

This book contains three crime books, The Door, The Confession, and The Red Lamp. The Confession was based on the discovery of a hidden piece of paper, which was given to Mary Roberts by the district attorney at the time it was found. For many years, she has called up the woman who had signed her own name and was told that Mary had her confession, that its hiding place had been discovered, and that only the absence of a body save her from a charge of murder. However, these situations are few. I The Door, there was a slight basis of fact on which to start, when Mary was in the hospital at the time she realized the possibilities. But, The Red Lamp was the most difficult of all Marys crime stories, according to Mary. She wrote forty thousand words of it, went down to the basement and burned it and started all over again. It has a certain interest, too, in that it is related by a man. Otherwise, she is stuck very firmly to her own sex as narrators, in some cases having them assist in the solution of the mystery.
